INTRODUCTION.

In Volume III. of the Proceedings of the St. Paul's Ecclesiological Society, pages 241—298, will be found a Paper on the Images, Altars, and Lights existing in the churches of West Kent prior to the Reformation. The paper was founded on the bequests contained in the wills of West Kent folk from about 1400 to 1560, and was supplemented by an article in Archæologia Cantiana, Vol. XXIII., pages 134—149, which dealt with the parishes forming the Deanery of Shoreham, in the same county. In the course of preparing these two contributions to the ecclesiological history of the county of Kent I extracted from the wills not only bequests to Images and Lights, but a large amount of interesting information respecting the fabrics of the churches, and gifts of "ornaments" for the carrying on of divine worship, together with other items relating to the various parishes. These extracts I have now arranged in a form which I hope will be useful to those engaged in writing parochial histories. Taken together with the information contained in the papers quoted above, the whole of the details to be gathered from the mediæval wills of West Kent people are now available for reference.

It is unnecessary to point out the extreme value and interest of the evidence these extracts present to us—this is well known and acknowledged—but it is only when a fairly complete collection for a given area is brought together that we are able to realize the great variety of the subjects dealt with, and to gauge something of the depth of the affection with which the donors must have regarded the parish in which they lived and the church in which they worshipped.

As an introduction to the parochial lists which form the subject of the present work, it will I think be useful to indicate certain special items of information contained therein, and I propose to do this under the following headings:—

I. The fabric and fittings of the church.
II. Monuments.
III. Ornaments (including vestments, books, plate, and bells).
IV. Varia.

I.—The Fabric and Fittings of the Church.

Although very few of our West Kent churches were wholly rebuilt in the fifteenth century, yet that period was one of great activity, and many additions were made to existing buildings. Conspicuous amongst these additions are the towers, which, although of no great architectural pretensions, have a certain character of their own. The earliest in date, of which the wills give us information, is that at Crayford, concerning which John Luffwyk, in his will dated 1406, states that he had paid one John Wells, "cementarius," a certain sum for making the new bell tower of the parish church, and he left £10 towards carrying on the work. Other towers were being built as follows:—

Chevening, 1506 to 1521.	St. Margaret's, Rochester, 1457.
Deptford, 1476 to 1483.	Seal, 1510 to 1529.
West Farleigh, 1523.	Stoke, 1479 to 1541.
Lewisham, 1471 to 1512.	Woldham, 1460 to 1483.

The bequests for Lewisham are very complete, and include the "vice" or stairway and the glazing of the "grete new window with the pictor of the passion of Our Lord."

At Stoke the bequests linger on until 1541, and the condition of the tower at the present day shews that it was never completed.

At Dartford there is a bequest in 1477 to the work of the bell tower, and in 1527 and 1528 to setting up the cross over the steeple. This was not a rebuilding, but refers to the upper storey of the tower, the date of which is plainly late in the fifteenth century. The main portion of the tower is early Norman work.

At Leigh we have a bequest in 1525 to the parish for the purpose of building a tower, to be paid when the parishioners take the work in hand. The enthusiasm soon died away, for the tower remained in an unfinished condition until the year 1861, when, on the general restoration of the church, it was completed.

Other bequests for work going on in connection with the towers are as follows:—

Ashurst, 1502-3.
Bidborough, 1492.
Capel, 1527.
Chatham, 1465.
Cobham, 1494.
Farnborough, 1538.
Gravesend, 1532.
Lee, 1495 and 1503.
Luddesdown, 1494.
Otford, 1464 and 1476.
St. Nicholas, Rochester, 1523.
St. Clement, Rochester, 1475.
Speldhurst, 1486.
Stone, 1508.
Teston, 1521.

At Horton Kirby there is a bequest in 1475, "Ad reparacionem campanilis pro Schyngelyng," which is of interest, since it indicates that the central tower of that church (which was rebuilt from the crossing in brick in the eighteenth century) was probably crowned with a shingled spire.

When we leave the western tower and proceed eastward to the nave we do not find so many bequests. This is no doubt accounted for by the fact that the body of the majority of the churches had been built already, and that except for the widening of the aisles now and again, little addition was required. There are, however, a few notes which, taken in conjunction with the existing work, indicate rebuilding or considerable alteration:—

Ash, 1472. Reparation and works of the nave.
Bromley, 1467. New aisle.
Cliffe, 1413. Roof over the aisle.
Cobham, 1503. Reparation of the nave.
Cudham, 1487. The roof.

Hoo, Allhallows, 1473—1502. Works of the nave. These were the addition of a clearstory, new roof, widening the aisles and placing new windows, rood screen, and seats in the nave.

Ightham, 1420. "Ad construcionem fabrice ecclesie." This would be about the date of the present building.

Lee, 1518. Building the church. This church was pulled down in 1814.

Leybourne, 1533. Works generally.

Rochester, St. Clement, 1517. Building the church. This church has long been destroyed.

Shorne, 1496. Making an arch.

Snodland, 1472. Reparation of the north aisle.

Tunbridge, 1473. Great reparation of the church.

West Wickham, 1509. North aisle (since altered considerably).

Yalding, 1493. New work of the nave. This was probably the widening of the aisles. The nave arcade is of the fourteenth century, but the aisle windows, notably those of the north aisle which retain their original tracery, are late fifteenth-century work.

At Hartley in 1473 and Kemsing 1499 are bequests for buttresses.

For the fabric of the chancels—and here we may note that our forefathers used both the words "chancel" and "quire" to indicate the eastern part of a parish church—we do not find many bequests, probably because the care thereof fell to the rector or vicar. At Beckenham in 1535 there is a bequest for "selying of the chaunsell." In 1471 at North Cray and in 1474 at Nursted are bequests for the reparation of the chancel windows, but this may refer to the glass and not the stonework, and in 1446 at Lamberhurst is a gift for the east window.

When we come to actual additions, such as chapels, we find not a few:—

Addington, 1463. The chapel of the Assumption of Our Lady is spoken of as "newly built."

Erith, 1525. A chapel was ordered to be built in the churchyard, presumably like that at Pembury, quite detached. This has disappeared.

High Halstow, 1472—74. Chapel of St. James (South Chapel).
Hunton, 1513. Chapel of Our Lady, on the south side.
Lewisham, 1500. Chapel of Our Lady.
Rochester Cathedral Church, 1389. Lady Chapel spoken of as newly built.
Stone, 1526. The Wiltshire Chapel.
Strood, 1501. Chapel of Our Lady.
Strood, 1517-18. Chapel of the Holy Trinity.

Of these, the churches at Lewisham and Strood have been rebuilt, and no part of the work here recorded remains.

Of bequests for the making of windows there are a few examples, but they are not as a rule explicit enough to enable them to be identified to-day :—

Birling, 1501. Reparation of a window on the south side.
Cowden, 1487. A new window.
Hadlow, 1488—93. Window on the north side.
Ightham, 1374. See Archæologia Cantiana, Vol. IV., p. 224.
East Peckham, 1491. Reparation of St. Blase's window and making windows in the stepill.
Shipbourne, 1496. New window.

The church porch entered into both the religious and secular life of the people, and we are not, therefore, surprised to find bequests thereto :—

Addington, 1474. Reparation of the north porch.
Hunton, 1513. Building the porch, and in 1532 bequest for the roofing of the same.
Orpington, 1370. Building of the porch (west end).
Snodland, 1461. Making the west porch.
Stoke, 1545. Mending the north door. [This is the porch entry.]

Of other works worthy of special notice I may mention the reparation of "Le Vestrey" at Cobham in 1519. In 1534 John Mott left 40*s*. to the church of Hoo, "to white it with lyme and sand"—one more proof, if one were needed, that whitewash was not the invention of the Puritan or of the eighteenth-century churchwarden,

At Aylesford Priory, Robert Pirry in 1513 left 6*s.* 8*d.* to the reparation of the cloisters, which indicates the probable date of that part of the building, which still remains.

Of the interior fittings of the churches I may draw attention to the following :—

Bromley, 1513. Gift of boards for seats.
Burham, 1516. Covering over the high altar.
Keston, 1521. Making seats.
Teston, 1525. Cover for the font.
Westerham, 1490. Making seats.

And we find bequests for glass windows at West Wickham in 1495, at Lewisham in 1498, and at Woldham in 1501 for the western window.

There is a curious gift at Westerham in 1490 of a cloth "to run on a wire with rings overthwart the quier at the curate and clerk's books," possibly to keep off the draught.

The fifteenth century saw the erection or rebuilding of roodlofts in a very large proportion of the churches. The following epitome will indicate the work of this nature in West Kent as revealed by the wills available :—

Ashurst, 1463. Work generally.
Aylesford, 1524. Painting the roodloft.
Aylesford, 1531. Gilting the roodloft.
Bexley, 1501. Roodloft works.
Bidborough, 1524. Roodloft works.
Brenchley, 1523—32. New Roodloft.
Burham, 1498—1505. Making the stairs or "vice" of the loft.
Burham, 1511—16. Painting.
Cudham, 1468—72. New loft.
Frindsbury, 1471—74. Roodloft works.
Gravesend, 1491. Roodloft works.
Hadlow, 1510. Roodloft works.
Higham, 1496—1500. New loft.
Lewisham, 1502. Roodloft works.
Nettlestead, 1471. Roodloft works.
Rochester, St. Nicholas, 1502. Making loft.
Rochester, St. Nicholas, 1527. Reparations.

Rochester, St. Margaret, 1524. Painting and gilding.
Seal, 1492—1502. New loft.
Shorne, 1485—93. New loft.
Speldhurst, 1518—27. Roodloft works.
Tunbridge, 1483—1517. Roodloft works.
Yalding, 1493. New beam.

At Hoo, St. Werburgh, in 1493 is a bequest for painting a Doom over the rood.

II.—Monuments.

In a large number of instances the testators of the wills under consideration leave directions to be buried within the parish church, frequently mentioning the exact spot, either before or near a particular image, or in a tomb prepared in their lifetime. Any bequests of this nature will be found in the parochial notes, and may be of assistance in naming tombstones or other memorials from which the name has perished.

The request for a memorial generally takes the form of a brass, and of these we have the following:—

Addington, 1463. William Watton, Esq. Brass of self, 2 wives and children.
Ash, 1465. *Richard Galon, rector, "in monument prepared." This is a half effigy of a priest.
Brenchley, 1532. John Mawde. Self, wives and children.
Crayford, 1526. Thomas Goldsmith, with signs of the Four Evangelists.
Eynesford, 1465. John Donett. Inscription with arms of himself and wife.
Farnborough, 1595. John Dalton. Inscription.
Gravesend, 1500. Richard Mikylhalf. Stone with "penner and hynkehorne."
Greenwich, 1547. Agnes Baltrop (midwife to Queen Jane). Self, husbands and inscription; in churchyard.
Hoo, St. Mary, 1532. Giles Palmar. Inscription.
Hoo, All Hallows, 1518. *Sir Steven Sheraton, vicar.
West Malling, 1488. John Browne. Self, wife and children, and in each a corner a pair of tailor's shears.

* Brass still existing.

Rochester, St. Margaret, 1465. *Thomas Codde, vicar.

Stoke, 1511. Thomas Iden. Self, wife "and a litle man childe holdyng hur by the beades."

Stone, 1473. John Bokelond. Inscription, and at each corner of the stone a buckle to be engraved.

West Wickham, 1515. *Sir John Stokton, rector.

At Horsmonden John Bobbe alias Totty, rector, in 1484 desired his tomb should be made so that it could be used for the Easter Sepulchre. John Pimpe, Lord of the Manor of Nettlestead, made a similar bequest in 1496, and many other instances could be cited outside the area now under consideration. The position on the north side of the chancel was one of great sanctity and honour for many reasons; it was close to the spot where the Gospel was read, it was also close to one of the principal images in the church (either Our Lady or the Patron), and, to crown all, it was the position usually occupied by the Easter Sepulchre. It is not surprising, therefore, that as a place of sepulture it should have been eagerly sought after.

At Aylesford in 1533 Edward Colepepir desired to be buried in the high chancel in the tomb of Margaret his mother. The tomb was then to be closed up and his arms placed thereon. The Colepepir tomb there was, however, remade about 1600.

There is an interesting request at Beckenham in 1545 for a tomb in the churchyard to be constructed of four posts of heart of oak, the heads to be covered with lead, and a stone placed over the whole. Memorials of this form are common in many churchyards, but the uprights are usually stone.

Another somewhat similar request will be found at Birling in 1503, where William Cleygate desired to have stones over himself and his wife and four stone crosses set about them; the aley hard by was also to be "borderid with breke stones." Bricks are also mentioned by William Swetesyre of North Cray 1527 as the material to be employed for his tomb; and again in a bequest of John Canon of Snodland in 1534.

Gilbert Carleton, Vicar of Farningham in 1503, wished

* Brass still existing.

to be buried before the high altar so that he might lie under the feet of the priest saying mass, or, if this were not possible, under the step at the entrance to the church, "so that every creature comyng yn may trede upon my buriall." The idea no doubt was that some at least would remember him in prayer. This longing for remembrance by those which come after, which runs through so many of these mediæval bequests, is very human, and adds a touch of pathos to many of the records.

III.—Ornaments.

In these extracts will be found the usual gifts of vestments for "ministers at all times of their ministrations," but few of them call for any special remarks. There are, however, two bequests of interest. At Erith William Abell, in 1526, left £6 13*s.* 4*d.* towards the "bying of a sute for deacon and subdeacon to be like and according to the vestment which my lady of Shrowesbury of late did give to the said church of Erehith, and I will ther be a scriptur on the back of either of the said vestments desiring the parishens to pray for my soule." The Edwardian inventory for Erith will be found on page 150 of Vol. VIII. of Archæologia Cantiana, but nothing therein clearly fits the above description.

The other gift to which I have referred is at Stone, and is part of the bequest of Sir John Wilshire, knight, in 1527. He left "to the parishe church of Stone a chesible and a tonycle w^t^ the albes, amyces, stoles, and other their apparel for a prest and his deacon to singe or say masse in of the value of tenne pounds, in the which chesible and tonycle I will that myn armes shalbe browdered for a remembrance after the best maner." In the Edwardian inventory, 1552, this is entered as "Item on vestmente of red damaske with the deacon of the same sute of the gifte of Sir John Wilshire, Knyghte." (Archæologia Cantiana, Vol. XI., page 416.)

Sir John Wilshire also left a cope embroidered with his arms to Dartford Church, but there is no distinct reference to it in the inventory of 1552.

Of books for the services of the church, bequests will be found in considerable numbers—mass books, graylls, antiphoners, processioners, portoses, etc. At St. Nicholas, Rochester, is a bequest of an "antiphoner, called a cowcher," i.e., a large book to lie on a desk.

There are also numerous gifts of plate, chalices, cruets, crosses, censers, pixes, etc. Some of the chalices were to be specially engraved as memorials, e.g., Richard Longeman of High Halstow in 1493 left chalices to that and neighbouring churches, "in the which I will the name of me Richard Longeman and John At the Sole be imprynted in the fote." Of the later Elizabethan cups there is an interesting gift in 1599 by Thomas Steven, yeoman, to Keston of a silver cup, which is, I believe, still in use.

Organs are mentioned in seven parishes:—

Brenchley, 1520. To a pair of organs xx^{d} and another bequest of xij^{d} in the same year.

Bromley, 1494. To the organs* iij^{s} iiij^{d}.

Lewisham, 1521. Toward a payre of organs.*

Sundridge, 1518. To the church my portatyf organes.

Westerham, 1511. Renewyng and new castyng of the organnys that be now in the said churche to be made w^{t} iij stoppes aftir the new making.

Peter Bolde, singingman of the College of Rochester in 1545, mentions his musical instruments and gives to Mistress Smythe his clarycords and Mistress Warner his lute, and his "gimie" with the great horn he bequeaths to Cristofer the clerk.

The custom of bringing in a cup of wine at the marriage service, for which provision was made in the Sarum rite, with a reference to the blessing of the water by Our Lord at Cana, led to gifts of vessels for the purpose. We have here three such bequests, viz.:—

Birling, 1516. To the said church a maser to the entent to be occupied and dronke vppon at weddings and childewiffs and other ther suche necessaries.

* Organs are mentioned in the Inventories of 1552.

Chelsfield, 1513. To the said churche a maser cuppe for thys entent that every childewife also every bryde shall drynke in it.

The third instance is at Greenwich, where Thomasyn Sheby in 1506 left a standing cup of silver and gilt, with a cover weighing 23 ounces, which was to be carried before every bride at her marriage, "if they come to ye churchwardenis and dezier itt."

The above instances shew that the custom also obtained at the time of the churching of women.

Bells.

The bequests to or for the church bells are very numerous, and include gifts of new bells and sums for the general "reparation" of those already existing. The following summary will be of special interest to Kentish campanologists:—

IV.—Varia.

The miscellaneous bequests, which cannot be included under the above headings, are so numerous that any detailed mention of them would expand these prefatory notes beyond all reasonable limits. I must, therefore, content myself with drawing attention to a few of the more interesting entries.

Church House.

This necessary adjunct, the place of which is taken in modern church life by the parochial hall, appears to have existed in most parishes, and it is difficult to account for its disappearance for so many years. Bequests will be found relating thereto at Greenwich in 1517, at Higham in 1485, and at All Hallows, Hoo, in 1518. The Higham bequest is of interest, since it states that the house was founded and made for the keeping and safeguard of the parish church goods, and that the keeper of the house was elected and chosen by the parishioners. The house at Greenwich adjoined the churchyard, and was given for the purpose of being used for the refreshment provided at burials and months' minds, "because it is not lauffull to ete and dryncke w'in the church," and also as a place of business for the churchwardens.

Yeve-ales.

The church ale—one of the mediæval methods of parochial merry-making combined with business, of which the bazaar or sale of work is the modern representative—finds frequent mention in the wills, but in the form of a Yeve-ale or Give-ale, where the object was not so much the raising of money as the commemoration of the founder. Of these ales we have instances at Birling in 1508, where is a bequest of five bushels of barley "to be delivered to the yeveale of Alhalows"; at Ryarsh in 1518; at Holborough in Snodland in 1503; at St. Paul's Cray in 1505; at Stoke in 1513, where it is called "the brotherhood otherwise callid a yeueale," which received a gift of a couple of oxen and forty sheep; and lastly at St. Werburgh, Hoo. This last was on quite a large scale. It was founded in 1480 by one Stephen Jacobe, who left his property charged with the upkeep of a Yeve-ale on Trinity Eve and Trinity Sunday, when five bushels of wheat, a seme of malt, and 12*d.* in cheese were to be distributed. There was also a house at Greenhill in the same parish called the Yeve-ale House, mentioned by Thomas Bedell in 1528, where an ale was held on St. Werburgh's Day, the whole being managed by the Wardens and Brethren of the Yeve-ale.

Rogationtide and other Processions.

Another feature which has now entirely disappeared was the Rogationtide Procession, when opportunity was taken to institute gifts of food and drink as a commemoration. In 1521 John Whelar of Greenwich left 3*s.* 4*d.* a year for six years to be spent at the Cross, near Deptford, in the Rogation days. At Cuxton in 1538 we have fuller instructions in the will of John Absolon, yeoman. He desired that on Tuesday in the Rogation Week the parish, coming in procession to Upperdown, should be given a drinking after the manner and form in which he had been used to give to the parishioners, and after the gospel was said or sung the parson or his deputy was to say De profundis, with the collect for his soul and all Christian souls. John Brown of Eltham in 1533 left a firkin of ale and 12*d.* in bread to be distributed on Tuesday in the Rogation Week at the Procession at the Cross on "Shoters hill," and 1*d.* to the priest reading the gospell, and another 1*d.* to the clerk.

There is another Eltham bequest in 1517 by Roger Leche, who desired Rauff Letham to keep on Wednesday in the Cross Week at the Cross before his door, "when the Procession cumyth in brede and ale vj*d.*, and vpon Seint Thomas nyght after the fest of Seint John Baptyst at the bonefyre in brede and ale vj*d.*"

Obits.

Of the ordinary form of commemoration, viz., an obit, there are of course many instances. One of the best instances will be found in 1529 under Greenwich, where John Champneys charged his tenement called The White Hart with the expenses of an obit on Friday after St. Denis Day in October, the same to be arranged by the Master and Wardens of the Brotherhood of St. George and St. Anne and the Churchwardens of Greenwich, and after mass a distribution was to be made to the poor of 4*s.* in bread, 2*s.* in spiced bread, a 4*s.* barell of ale, a gallon of "mawlsay," 2 lbs. of "cumfets," and two cheeses. At Halstow in 1522 pasties were to be baked, while at Aylesford in 1528 sixteen halfpenny loaves are mentioned, four of which were to be given to the ringers with a gallon of ale. This custom of giving bread survived the Reformation, and is even still kept up in some parishes, although the original intention, viz., that the recipient should remember the donor in prayer, is, it is to be feared, more honoured in the breach than the observance. At St. Paul's Cray in 1560 will be found the endowment of a sermon, a form of commemoration which became popular as a species of years' mind.

Churchyard and other Crosses.

A cross formed a prominent object in every churchyard in the period under review, and we have several bequests for the erection thereof, e.g., at Chislehurst in 1504, at Lewisham in 1523. At Strood in 1482 and elsewhere it is alluded to as the Palmcross, from the part it took in the Palm Sunday Procession.

Crosses were also common in other parts of the parish, as will be seen in the notes above respecting the Rogationtide processions. One stood in the street at Footscray, and was under repair in 1526, and in 1515 we have a bequest to the building of the cross before the parson's gate at Speldhurst. The name has survived in many cases, although the actual cross has long disappeared; in fact I cannot recall a single instance in Kent of a mediæval village or way-side cross having survived.

Rectory or Vicarage House.

Bequests occur in 1413 for the repair of the Rectory at Cliffe, an interesting house which still remains, and in 1561 Richard Horsfall, Vicar, left £13 6*s.* 8*d.* to the building of the vicarage at Burham. But the most interesting gift of this nature occurs at Shorne, where in 1495 Thomas Page left a house called Normans in Up Shorn as a house for the Vicar, who was, in return, to say mass for him on Ascension Day.

Dilapidations.

This fruitful source of heart-burning is the subject of a bequest at Ditton in 1501, where Sir Hewe Hudson, the Rector, left his best portos (breviary) to his successor on condition that he asked no more for dilapidations.

Parish Clerk.

As usual the parish clerk is frequently mentioned in the West Kent wills, being remembered with a small gift, usually a few pence, but in three instances we have bequests of a house for him. At Eltham in 1516 John Downer left "a litell house joyning vppon the Kechen for the parissh clarke of Eltham to duell in for ever." At St. Werburgh, Hoo, in 1534 John Mott similarly left a "litle mesuage and a garden," whilst at Hoo, St. Mary, in 1515 Richard Saunder wished his house in Church Street to be sold, but the parish was to have it before any other "yf they will for the clarke a noble w^t^in the price."

The Sexton.

At Penshurst in 1550 Oliver Godfray, the Rector, left a rent-charge of 30*s*. to find a Sexten, or to be put to some other use for the parish.

Parish Fine.

There are three bequests for relieving parishes of the "Common Fine"—a very ancient impost—one at Eltham in 1509, one at Luddesdown in 1522, and the third at Shorne in 1527.

Holy Bread.

I have only noticed one bequest for bearing the charge of the Holy Loaf, viz., at West Farleigh, where John Reve in 1409 left a cow "to sustain the Blessed Bread distributed between the parishioners on Sundays."

The Clock.

The making of the clock on the tower is the subject of bequests at Bromley in 1551 and 1553, and at Dartford in 1521 is a bequest for the reparation of the clock. These were sun-dials. At Lewisham in 1656 the Vicar, Abraham Colfe, left a bequest for a clock to go by the sun, and a trifle to the clark to keep it in order.

Yew trees.

The Yews or Palm trees are mentioned now and again, and I strongly suspect that they were regarded as semi-sacred, although no doubt occasionally they are named as a convenient and well known object, as in the will of William

Monde of Burham in 1521, in which he desires to be buried "between the U tree and the church door." Bequests for burial under the Yew will be found at Bromley in 1544 and at Halstow in 1529, where it is called "the little palm tree."

Shoes, etc.

At Halstow in 1540 is a bequest to enable Shoes to be distributed to poor folk on Good Friday; and similarly at Milton-by-Gravesend in 1523 Joan Bull, widow, left the proceeds of the sale of a house for the purpose of giving eight poor persons, four men and four women, a pair of "syngle sole shooes" on Good Friday and on the Feast of the Assumption of Our Lady.

Bequests of this character are fairly common, e.g., Alexander Payntor of Horsemonden in 1495 left red herrings and white herrings to be distributed on Fridays and Sundays in Lent; Joan Hunt of Northfleet left twelve pewter platters for use at poor maidens' marriages and poor women's churchings, and other instances will be found scattered throughout the notes.

Roads.

Of almost equal merit with gifts to the church the care of the highways was regarded in the Middle Ages, and bequests thereto are common. A few may be mentioned: At Aylesford in 1528 we have gifts to the "causye," and similarly at Lewisham in 1494 to 1532 are bequests to the "causey at Catford," where no doubt the river often overflowed and a high-banked footway was a necessity. At Denton in 1499 will be found gifts of loads of stone to make good the highway between that place and Milton Church.

At Grain it was not so much the roads that gave anxiety as the river wall, and in 1507 and 1518 are bequests "to the reparation of the wall of Grean." At Offham the village well, for some reason, appears to have been regarded as worthy of mention, and is referred to in 1481 and 1535 as "the comyn well standing besides the churche" or "in the comen playn." The well is also mentioned at Erith, Almshouses.

Bequests to these houses of charity will be found under Dartford (1530) and Rochester (1523 and 1528).

The religious changes of the sixteenth century are of course reflected in these wills. There is a decided falling off in bequests after about 1540, and by Queen Elizabeth's time they are very scarce. At Cuxton in 1559-60 there is a bequest of ten shillings "to the altar and Communion table," a phrase that not inaptly sums up the compromise which was intended (but hardly carried out) as the Elizabethan settlement. A bequest in 1595 to Farnborough Church of a green cloth for the Communion Table adds another to the many evidences of coloured coverings of the Holy Table in Elizabeth's reign and that of her successors.

The unrest engendered by the changes made or proposed finds expression in such phrases as "To be buried after the vse and custome of the Realme" [Richard Swysle, yeoman, of Erith, 1547 (XI., 17)], or "To be buried according to the custome of the Realme" [Thomas Wrayt of Halstowe, 1547, proved 1550 (XI., 121)].

Under Tudley will be found a note from the will of George Fane, Esq., 1571, in which he desires to be buried "according to the laudable custome and vsage that then shall fortune to be hadd and vsed throughe the realme of England in the Catholike Churche."

Bequests other than of ecclesiological interest.

I have not attempted to include in the following notes the many references to field names which are to be found in mediæval wills, neither does it come within the scope of the present work to deal with the other bequests of a secular nature which form the bulk of the contents of the wills. There are, however, a few bequests which may find a place here as an indication of the information to be obtained occasionally.

Richard Bayden of Asshurst, 1539, proved 1544 (X., 75), gives the names of his cattle: Ros, Thurst, Coppe, Pryme, Mowse, Calver, Skulle, Gentyll, Bren, Swallowe.

Clement Forman of Brenchley, 1557 (XII. (i.), 131), names certain of his apple trees:—

"To Bennet my wife the apells that yerely shall growe uppon iiij trees abowte my howse, that is to say the Risening tree in the filde against the strete and the Pomwater tre growing in the same fielde against the howse, the Blanche Stewarde tree and another Steward tree both growing in the orchard all the tyme afforesaid."

The following may be taken as samples of the more interesting bequests of jewels and domestic plate:—

"To Kateryn my wyfe a grete standyng cuppe callyd the bell, also to William my sone a dosen of spones that is to wyte d^i dosen w^t thapostelis and a noder halfe dosen w^t maydyn hedis." Thomas Alen, Seynt Clement's, Rochester, 1492. (V., 195.)

"To John Mungham my sone my gylt standyng cuppe keueryd, my signett of golde grauyn w^t myn armes," etc. William Mungham, 1496. (V., 299.)

"To my daughter Alis a peyre of beds of corall of o^r lady sawtur gardyd w^t siluer and gilte w^t a knop of perlis and a gyrdill of vynys covrse harnest w^t siluer w^t a chester." John Taylor of Erhigth, 1500. (V., 380.)

In the will of John Menge of Horsemonden, 1527 (VIII., 119), will be found an order setting aside the custom of gavelkind.

As one would expect, these wills occasionally let us behind the scenes into the midst of what was no doubt at the time a cause célèbre in the little village concerned. When, for instance, John Braibroke of Cooling in 1535 desired Alice his wife to pay his son Thomas 40*s.*, and coupled therewith a request that he was "not to medle w^t no thing of my testament or laste will nor my wif Alice to medle w^t no thing that is or hath been betwene me and my son Thomas fro the begynning of the worlde vnto this present daye," it is not very difficult to imagine the talk of the place over the bickerings of the house of Braibrook; or, again, at Charlton in 1527 when Philip Randes requests his son "to take the brode worlde as

I have doon," and gives him his "daily blessyng, for other worldly goods I have none to gyf hym," I think we can picture the temperament of the youth. But a still more vivid sketch is provided by the will of Walter Mylys of Birling in 1522. There was evidently a long-standing dispute between him and the widow of one Robert Wynyard over the sum of £3, and this was unsettled when he made his will. Should he to be at peace at the last give up that for which he had contended? Well, he would shift the responsibility on to the shoulders of the claimant; she might have the £3 "that is in travys betwene her and me and she will take it bitwene God, the devyll, and her conscience." We do not know which prevailed!

THE PARISH CHURCHES

OF

EAST KENT.

INTRODUCTION.

This account of the Parish Churches in the Diocese of Canterbury, with reference to their Dedication, Altars, Images, Lights, etc., is compiled from the wills of the parishioners proved in the Archdeaconry and Consistory Court at Canterbury.*

The wills proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, and now preserved at Somerset House, have not been consulted, nor those at Lambeth, but a few notes from the former have been kindly supplied by Mr. Leland L. Duncan, F.S.A., who contributed to Vol. III. of the Transactions of the St. Paul's Ecclesiological Society a Paper entitled, "The Parish Churches of West Kent, their Dedications, Altars, Images, and Lights;" and to Archæologia Cantiana, Vol. XXIII., pp. 134—49, a similar account relating to the Churches in the Deanery of Shoreham. The present Work, therefore, with the above exceptions, completes the County of Kent.

St. Mary and St. Eanswithe (Folkestone).
St. Mary and St. Eadburga (Lyminge).
St. Mary and Holy Cross (Milsted).
St. Mary and St. Sexburga (Minster in Sheppey).
St. Mary and St. Radegund (Postling).
St. Mary and St. Mary Magdalene (Capel).
St. Martin and St. Gregory (Wye).
St. Peter and St. Paul, 45 (but in 17 only St. Peter is mentioned).

The dedication of the Churches of Elmeston, Little Mongeham, and Promhill, are unknown; neither the Pre-Reformation Wills at Canterbury nor the Archbishops' Registers at Lambeth give the dedication of these Churches. Elmeston, from the will of Alexander Stonard (1529), is possibly St. Peter.

Note.—In this list of Dedications is not included those Churches in the Diocese of Canterbury which have been printed in the "Parish Churches of West Kent."

The Trinity.

An anthropomorphic representation of the Holy Trinity is mentioned as existing in many of the Churches, but only Milton (near Sittingbourne) and Queenborough have this dedication in East Kent. In West Kent, Dartford is the only Church so dedicated.

Our Lord.

In Bilsington Priory Church was a Light of the Name of Jesus.

At All Saints, Canterbury, the Light of the Nativity of Our Lord, which is said to have been recently introduced (1487).

In the destroyed Parish Church of St. Peter in Dover was a Light of the Passion of Our Lord at the pillar beside the font.

At Ashford was the Light of the Figure of Jesus.

Our Lady.

Every Church had at least one Image of Our Lady, and often several. At Chislet, which is so dedicated, there were seven different Lights. In many parishes the different hamlets maintained their special Light to Our Lady or some other Saint, which was known by the name of that part of the parish.

The Image of Our Lady generally stood on the north side of the high altar, and the Patron Saint probably on the south side.

Altars, Images, or Lights are mentioned under the following different forms in the Churches:—

(1) The Nativity of Our Lady (8 September)—
Chislet.
St. Lawrence in Thanet.
Wye.

(2) Our Lady of Grace—
Lenham.
Newington next Sittingbourne.
Stone in Oxney.

(3) Conception of Our Lady (8 December)—
At Chislet was a Light.

(4) Purification of Our Lady (2 February)—
Folkestone.

[This one instance corresponds with one at West Malling.]

(5) Our Lady of Pity.
At Charing it is explained as being "the Light of the Pity and Compassion, which has the Blessed Virgin at her Son's Passion and Burial."

This Image or representation was found in 62 Churches in East Kent, as compared with the 27 Churches in the Western Division of the county.

(6) Our Lady and Joseph—
Chislet.
Faversham.

This is probably the same as:

(7) Our Lady in Jeson (or Childbirth)
Chislet.
Cranbrook.
Faversham.
Lenham.
Lydd.

(8) Salutation of Our Lady (2 July)
Hackington.
Minster in Sheppey (altar).
Sandwich, St. Mary's (altar).
Westwell.

(9) Our Lady of Bethlehem—
Faversham.

(10) Assumption of Our Lady (15 August)

Canterbury, St. Mary Northgate.

(13) Our Lady of Nesse—
See under Pilgrimages, page xviii.

St. Thomas of Canterbury.

This Saint is mentioned as being represented in 41 Churches, and in 19 other Churches mention is made of "St. Thomas," probably indicating the Archbishop to whom Hospitals were dedicated at Canterbury and Sandwich, and a Chapel in the garden of the Priory of St. Gregory at Canterbury.

In the following Churches there was a Chapel or altar in honour of St. Thomas of Canterbury:—

Adisham.
Ash.

In the Church of Buckland, near Dover, was a "Chapel of St. Thomas," but this is probably the "Blessed Thomas de Halys," a monk of the Priory of St. Martin, slain by the French in 1295, when they attacked and ravaged Dover (see page 104).

In West Kent, St. Thomas of Canterbury is found at Crayford, Dartford, East Farleigh, Greenwich, Lamberhurst, Otford, St. Nicholas, Rochester, and Wouldham.

Various Saints.

Amongst the various Saints mentioned in the Parish Churches are:—

St. Adrian (4 March), at Ashford and Boughton Malherbe.

Also the Light of All Souls at Broomfield, Great Hardres, and Monks Horton. In West Kent, at Chatham.

St. Appoline (23 July), at Cranbrook, Frittenden, Smarden, and Wye. There was an Image of this Saint in the south choir aisle of the Cathedral at Canterbury.

St. Armigell.—He was born in Britain about the year 482, but went to Britany, where he lived as a hermit and worked great miracles. In the Church of St. Andrew in Canterbury there was a Light in his honour. In West Kent, an Image at Brenchley and Yalding. In the Sarum Missal is a Mass in his honour.

St. Augustine (presumably the Apostle of the English) is found at Brookland, St. Andrew's Canterbury, East Langdon, Northbourne, Snave, and Stonor.

St. Blaise (3 February).—He was the patron Saint of the woolcombers, and is found in the Churches of Benenden, Broomfield, Cranbrook, Hawkhurst, Leeds, Marden, Otham, Pluckley, Sevington, and Wychling. In West Kent, only at East Peckham and Crayford.

St. Ciriac (8 August), at Brabourne (possibly this was the original dedication of the Church) and Preston next Wingham.

St. Clare (12 August), at Ashford, Hythe (where there was a Chapel), and Stone in Oxney. In West Kent, at Deptford.

St. Cosmus and St. Damian (27 September).—They were two brothers and Arabs by birth, who laboured and were martyred in Cilicia. Having studied medicine, they relieved the suffering poor, from whom they would take no payment. Martyred under Diocletian in the fourth century. At Bicknor was an altar, and the Churches of Blean and Challock are dedicated to them.

St. Crispin and St. Crispian (25 October).—The Battle of Agincourt, being fought on 25 October 1415, caused these Saints to become popular in this country; they were the patrons of shoemakers. In Faversham Church was an altar, and at Tenterden an Image; whilst in West Kent their Images were in St. Nicholas, Rochester, and West Malling.

They are represented in the Dutch Glass (No. 157) in the Beaney Institute at Canterbury.

St. Dorothy (6 February) occurs only at Leeds.

St. Dunstan.—Four Churches are dedicated to him—one in Canterbury and those of Cranbrook, Frinstead, and Snargate. In Littlebourne Church was a representation of St. Dunstan in one of the windows (see page 197).

St. Edmund.—Probably this is Edmund Rich, the Archbishop of Canterbury (1234—40), who is commemorated on 16 November. At Faversham, Hythe, Lenham, and St. Nicholas in New Romney. But if St. Edmund the King and Martyr the day is 20 November, and to whom one of the destroyed Churches of Canterbury was dedicated; also Kingsdown.

St. Eanswithe (12 September).—At Brensett and Folkestone. For an account of this Saint and the finding of her Reliquary in the Parish Church of Folkestone see Archæologia Cantiana, Vol. XVI., p. 322.

St. Eustace (2 November) occurs at Nonington.

St. Gonella, in Royton Chapel in the parish of Lenham.

St. Helen.—There was an Image in St. Alphege at Canterbury.

St. Hiliary (13 January), in the destroyed Church of St. John the Baptist at Dover.

St. John of Bridlington (10 October 1379), who was canonized by Pope Boniface IX. (1389—1404), had an altar in two seaport towns, in the destroyed Church of St. Nicholas, Dover, and in the Church of St. Peter at Sandwich.

St. Loye (1 December), the patron of blacksmiths and guardian of horses, is found at Aldington, Ashford, Bridge, St. George's, Canterbury, Deal, St. Mary's, Dover (where there was a Chapel), Faversham, Frittenden, Goudhurst, Milton, Ospringe, Rolvenden, St. Martin in New Romney, and Staplehurst. In West Kent, at Bromley, Chalk, Dartford, Gillingham, Milton near Gravesend, and Sutton at Hone.

St. Mildred (20 February).—To this Kentish Saint three Churches are dedicated—one in Canterbury, Preston next Wingham, and Tenterden, whilst at Minster in Thanet was a Light.

St. Oswald (5 August).—The dedication of Paddlesworth Church near Lyminge to this northern Saint is through St. Ethelburga, daughter of King Ethelbert, the foundress of Lyminge, where she retired after the death of her husband Ædwine, slain at the Battle of Heathfield near Doncaster 12 October 633.

St. Osyth (or Sythe), one of the three daughters of Frithewald, a sub-king of Surrey, her mother being Wilburh, the daughter of Penda, King of Mercia. St. Osyth at Chiche (now known as St. Osyth in Essex) founded a religious community. Her Image was in the south choir aisle of Canterbury Cathedral, which may, perhaps, account for her being found in so many Churches in Kent—Ashford, Bapchild, Boughton Malherbe, Boughton Monchelsey, St. Dunstan in Canterbury, Charing, Chart near Sutton, Linton, Great Mongeham, Rodmersham, St. Mary and St. Clement in Sandwich, Stone in Oxney, and Tunstall. In West Kent, at Dartford, Eltham, Hadlow, St. Clement in Rochester, and Strood.

St. Radegund (13 August).—Besides the Abbey near Dover, there was a Light to this Saint in Teynham Church, whilst Postling Church is dedicated to St. Mary and St. Radegund.

St. Roke (16 August), at Holy Cross in Canterbury,

Cranbrook, the destroyed Church of St. Peter in Dover, Guston, and Wye. In West Kent, only at Woldham.

St. Rumwold (3 November).—The Church of Bonington is dedicated to this Saint.

St. Sebastian (20 January).—He was the patron of archers and pin-makers, and occurs at Boughton Malherbe, Charing, and Wye. In West Kent, at Bromley and All Hallows, Hoo.

St. Thomas the Apostle (21 December) is found at Eythorne, Faversham, Harty (the Church being dedicated to him), St. Nicholas at Wade in Thanet, and Staplehurst.

With reference to the Blessed Thomas of Dover, see page 104.

St. Troneon (7 February) is thought to be the same as St. Ronan, a Scotch Saint, Bishop of Kilmaronnock in Dumbarton. He is found at Bridge, St. Andrew's in Canterbury (where there was a Brotherhood), St. Mary Bredin in Canterbury, the destroyed Church of St. Peter at Dover, Faversham, and St. Clement, Sandwich.

St. Ursula (21 October) occurs in two of the Canterbury Churches—St. Andrew and Holy Cross, and in two of the Parish Churches of Sandwich—St. Mary and St. Peter. In Rochester Cathedral was an altar in the north transept.

St. Vincent, at Littlebourne, to whom the Church is dedicated, was a Spanish Deacon, who suffered martyrdom during the Diocletian persecution. On the north wall of the nave of Littlebourne Church is part of a wall-painting of St. Vincent.

St. Welcome is found at Harrietsham.

Local Saints.

In the porch of Hinxhill Church was the tomb of William of Sheriffeld, Wm. Bray in 1510 giving 12*d.* to the mending of this tomb.*†

* Mr. L. L. Duncan visited Hinxhill in August, 1906, and writes: "That the old porch on the south side of the Church has been pulled down and the doorway blocked up, a late porch of brick having been built further westward, and a new doorway broken through the wall."

† This might have been a representation of the Shrine of St. William of Perth in Rochester Cathedral, who came from Harrietfield, a village in Glen Almond, and was murdered at Rochester in 1201. (See Notes and Queries, 10 S., vi., p. 374.)

At Newington next Sittingbourne there was in the Church a Chapel of St. Robert, and Wm. at Wood of Upchurch in 1504 mentions this "St. Robert of Newenton parish" as a place of pilgrimage.

St. Sonday.

This is said to be St. Dominic, the founder of the Friars-Preachers or Dominicans, for John Topyn in his will, dated 1493 (P.C.C., 4, Vox), mentions "The Image of St. Dominic called St. Sonday."

Some have thought it refers to Our Lord or Sunday, and William Patten, who in 1548 published The Expedition into Scotland in 1547, speaking of various Saints, says, "and sweet St. Sunday comes once a week." (Tudor Tracts, 1532—88, edited by A. F. Pollard, p. 98.)

This Saint is found at Ashford, Bapchild, Bobbing, Boughton Malherbe, Great Chart, Hawkhurst, Kenardington, Leeds, Lenham, Lynstead, Ospringe, and Throwley. In West Kent, at Brenchley, Chalk, All Hallows, Hoo, and Strood.

King Henry VI.

Buried at Windsor and popularly proclaimed a Saint, attempts were made to canonize this King, whose tomb was visited, offerings made, and even miracles attributed to him. Images of Henry VI. were set up in many Churches and votive tapers burnt before the same. At Caversham in Berks was the dagger, venerated as a relic, with which the King is said to have been killed in the Tower. "Pilgrim Signs" represent the King crowned, with a ball surmounted by a cross in the left hand and a sceptre in the right hand. (See Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries, Second Series, vol. xii., p. 227, and the Illustrated Archæologist, vol. i., p. 245.)

He was venerated in the Churches of Boughton Monchelsey, Burmarsh, and Smarden. In West Kent, at Lewisham.

John Schorne.

At Faversham in 1515 John Sonte gave 20*d.* to the Light burning before Master John Shorn in the Parish Church of Faversham.

Although spoken of as a Saint or the Blessed John Schorne, there is no record of his canonization. His spring or well is still in existence near the village of North Marston in Bucks, in which Church he was buried before the high altar in 1314. (See The Reliquary and Illustrated Archæologist, vol. vii., pp. 37—44.)

Anchorite at Faversham.

Many of the parishioners of this town gave a bequest to the Ancras or Ancresse, who had a servant to attend her. But in 1541 "Sir Thos. Crakynthorpe" was anker or anchorite.

Hermit of Puxton.

At Puxton in the parish of Stodmarsh was a Hermit, for Robt. Smythe of Wickhambreux in 1516 gave "To the Armet of Puxton, 12*d.*"

Hermit of Sandwich.

Adjoining the Chapel of St. James in the parish of St. Mary, Sandwich, was an Hermitage. In 1535 a bequest of 6*s.* 8*d.* was made to the Ancras being at Our Lady Church, and in 1538 "To Sir John the Heremit, 6*s.* 8*d.*" John Steward, the last Hermit, became Vicar of St. Mary.

Hermit of Whitstable.

In 1514 "The Hermit of St. Anne's" is mentioned, and in 1519 "Robert Wodroff, heremyte."

Hermit of Lydd.

In 1521 was given 3*s.* 4*d.* towards the building of the new Chapel at the Hermitage.

The Hoklight.

Hoktide may possibly mean High Day, and seems to refer to Easter. It was a popular festival kept on the second Monday or Tuesday after Easter Sunday, when money was collected for parish purposes by humorous methods. (Historical English Dictionary.)

The name occurs in a Deed, 1257, of the payment of money on Hokeday. It is very doubtful if, as some say, it commemorates the day of St. Brice (13 November 1002), or the extinction of the Danish rule by the death of Hardicanute, 8 June 1041.

At River was the Light of St. Mary called Hokdaylight.

Seasalter: The Light of Our Lady called Hokday.

Staple: The Light called Hoclight.

Sturrey: The Hokelight.

St. Lawrence in Thanet: The Hokketide taper of East Clevesend.

Stourmouth: The Hoklight.

Tilmanstone: The Light called Hokeday Light.

Whitfield: The Hokelight.

Whitstable: Hogdaylight.

In Wickhambreux parish was a Hoke or Hooke Chapel, a separate building from the Parish Church, and perhaps the present post-office.

The Hogenelmoney at Biddenden and the Hognel Light at Hawkhurst may possibly refer to Hoktide.

In West Kent, at Brenchley in 1511 Robert Dan gave 12*d.* for a torch at Hoktime, and at Southfleet was the Light of All Saints of Hoke (1449).

The Palm Cross.

The churchyard cross, which was usually on the south side of the Church, marked the second station in the Palm Sunday procession, after the blessing of the palms in the Church, is called the "Palm Cross" at Ashford, Boughton Blean, Boxley, Eboney, Faversham, Hastingleigh, St. John's in Thanet, Lenham, Lynstead, Preston next Faversham, Reculver, St. Peter in Sandwich, and Wittersham.

For full particulars of the Palm Sunday procession, see Rock's Church of Our Fathers, vol. iv., pp. 227—32, and Processionale ad usum Sarum (Leeds, 1882), pp. 43—54.

Pilgrimages.

Bequests were made for persons to go on pilgrimage on behalf of the testator, and in some instances the person is named who is to undertake the pilgrimage.

The places mentioned are :—

1. Our Lady of Walsingham in Norfolk.

John Clarke of Frittenden in 1481 willed, That one have 6*s.* 8*d.* to visit the Image of Blessed Mary of Walsingham.

John Clement of Graveney in 1501 also gave 6*s.* 8*d.* to a pilgrim going to Blessed Mary of Walsingham.

2. The Blood of Hayles.

Simond Gaunt of the parish of St. Margaret at Cliffe in 1514 made request, That Richard Brown go to the Holy Blood of Hayles, and he to have a marc for his labour and my best gown, or else 6*s.* 8*d.* with the marc. [See a note under St. Margaret at Cliffe, page 271.]

3. The Rood of Grace at Boxley.

4. The Rood of Rest.

There was a "Rood of Rest" in the Church of West Malling and also in the Church of Schorne.

5. St. Robert of Newington (next Sittingbourne).

Wm. at Wood of Upchurch in 1504 mentions in his will, That Wm. at Wood and Thomas Rider hath promised to go Pilgrimage for me to Our Lady of Walsingham, to the Rood of Reste, to the Rood of Grace of Boxley, and to St. Robert of Newenton parish, and they shall have for their labours 10*s.* and four bushels of wheat.

6. The Rood of Hastings.

This may possibly have been the Rood in the Priory Church of the Holy Trinity at Hastings in Sussex.

Wm. Couper of Stone in Oxney in 1517 in his will directs, That my ex'ors cause Pilgrimage to be done, undone by my life, that is, to St. Stelikis [query as to this name], the Cross of the Rood [? Blood] of Halles, Our Lady of Nesse, and the Rood of Hastyng.

7. Our Lady of Nesse.

Juliana Greenhill (late of Snave) of St. Margaret's, Canterbury, where she was buried, in 1501 gave, To the Light of Our Lady of Nesshe, 6*d*.

John Giblot of Folkestone in 1513 gave, For an offering to Our Lady of Nesse, 4*d*. He also gave the same to Our Lady of Pulton, and Our Lady of Walsingham.

Thos. Stubbs of Borden in 1530 gave to Our Lady of Nesse, 20*d*.

In Malling Abbey Church (Assumption of Our Lady) a part of the building was so called.

Elisabeth Pellycan in 1487 desired to be buried by her husband in the Nesse of the Monastery of Our Blessed Lady of Westmalling.

Wm. Catelyn in 1499 desired to be buried in the body of the Church of the Monastery of Malling called the Nesse, that is to say, at the south end of the altar before the Image of Our Lady of Pity. (Parish Churches of West Kent, p. 279.)

Various.

At Mersham the "Light called croked beam" is mentioned in three wills: John Fagg, 1483; Thos. Byng, 1484; and Wm. Carpentar, 1502.

The "Light of the Brown Rood" is mentioned at Otterden, and the "Light of Almighty God called the Brownerood" at Sittingbourne, where it was in the Chapel of St. John the Baptist.

At Elham was the "Heyre Light" and the "Light called Trilleon my Harp," also "Trill on mine Harp," and "Trylonmyharp." (See Archæologia Cantiana, Vol. X., p. 63.)

At Elham and Staple was "The Egg Light," which may possibly have been maintained by gifts of eggs.

The "Alms Light" is mentioned in both the Parish Churches of St. Clement and St. Peter in Sandwich.

At Whitstable was the "Light Mustlar" and the "Muskyll taper." In the Century Dictionary "Muskylle" is given as an obsolete form of mussel. Did the mussel gatherers support a special Light in their Parish Church?

Smarden had the Light of Sir (also called Saint) Thomas Wohope, Whoope, or Woghope, who it seems was a former rector of the parish, for John Saunder of Smarden in 1510 gave 4*d.* to "The Light of Sir Thomas Wohope, sometime parson of the same Church."

A Dom. Thomas Woghope was Treasurer of Canterbury when on 22 May 1332 he was commissioned with others, by Abp. Simon Mepham, to examine candidates for Ordination. ("Christ Church Register L," fol. 20, per Rev. T. S. Frampton, F.S.A.)

This Thomas Woghope was probably the founder of the Light (perhaps in honour of St. Thomas of Canterbury), which was, however, known by his name, in the same way that the Hospital of St. Thomas of Canterbury in Sandwich was spoken of as the Hospital of St. Thomas Ellis, who was the founder.

At Biddenden in 1505 Richard Andrew gave to the Hogenelmoney, 4*d.*; whilst at Hawkhurst is the bequest of Wm. Hamon in 1506 to the Light called Hognellight during seven years after my death, every year 12*d.*

At Eboney, Robert Golding in 1513 gave to the "Light of Ovenani called Hogwell Light, 8*d.*" Ovenana is given as meaning an enclosure in the Record Interpreter.

Lenham Church appears to have possessed a clock, for John at Water in 1500 gave 12*d.* to the reparation of the clokke at Lenham.

The Bachelors' Light.

In St. Mildred's, Canterbury, was The Cross Light called the Bachelors, also spoken of as the Cross Light of Bachelors.

At Faversham, Henry Hatche in 1533 desired to be buried before the Bachelors' Light.

At Reculver was the Light which is called the Bachelors' Light in the Church.

In West Kent there was a similar Light in the Church of All Hallows, Hoo.

Youngmen's Light.

In Biddenden Church was the Light called Youngmen's Light or Light of St. Mary called Youngmen's Light. There was a similar Light at Frittenden, Reculver, and Rolvenden. In Whitstable Church was the Light of Our Lady that the men doth keep.

Maidens' Light.

In Biddenden Church was the Young Wemyn's Light, and at Frittenden the Light of the Maidens.

Image or Figure in a Window.

At East Langdon in 1534 there is the bequest of Wm. Forstall of 20*s.* to the maintenance of the Light of Our Lady standing in the glass window (page 184).

Littlebourne: Thos. Durrant of Elbright (? Elbridge) in 1529 desired to be buried in the churchyard even against the Trinity window. Two tapers each of 1½ lbs. were to be kept in the Trinity window in the Church at the cost of his son Robert.

Wm. Rigdon in 1518 desired to be buried in the Church of Littlebourne before the window of St. Dunstan, and gave to the making of the same window and for a Mass-book, 40*s.* His son Thos. Rigdon in 1525 gave 6*s.* 8*d.* to the making of the window that his father willed to be made (pages 197, 198).

Lyminge: Simon Hempsted in 1511 gave a taper of 4*d.* to burn before the Image of St. Christopher in the glass window (page 203).

The Jesus Mass.

The Jesus Mass was sung every Friday, being a weekly devotion to Our Lord, that became more frequent during the 15th century, after the adoption of the Feast of the Holy Name (7 August) in the year 1457.*

There is mention of this Jesus Mass at Ashford, Bethersden, Biddenden, Boughton Monchelsey, four of the Canterbury Churches—Holy Cross, St. Margaret, St. Mary Northgate, and St. Mildred—Cranbrook, St. Mary's, Dover, Eastrey, Elham, Faversham, Folkestone, Herne, Leeds, Lenham, Lydd, Maidstone, Newington, Nonington, Reculver, Rolvinden, St. Mary, Sandwich, Staplehurst, Tenterden, Whitstable, Wingham.

Brotherhoods.

These were connected with the Lights of a Parish Church, and often existed for the purpose of maintaining and looking after them. Where no name is given the bequest was "to each Light of which I am a brother" or "to every Brotherhood Light."

Note.—This Hospital of St. Lawrence was founded about the year 1149 (some authorities say in 1137) by Hugh de Trottescliff, then Abbot of St. Augustine's (1126—51), so that any monk of that Abbey suffering from any infectious disease, and especially leprosy, was to be removed to this Hospital, where they were provided for by the Chamberlain of the Abbey with their necessary food and clothing. Also the relatives of any monk reduced to great poverty were there to have sufficient sustenance. (See Thorne, 1810; Thos. of Elmham, 402; Hasted, vol. iv.)

NOTE.—This destroyed Parish Church was in Burgate Street on the north side near to the Gate (which was thus sometimes called St. Michael's Gate), and within the wall of the city. The cottages 5 to 8 on the north side of Burgate Street probably occupy the site of this Parish Church of St. Michael, whilst the opening between numbers 4 and 5 marks the south end of the ancient Queningate Lane, which the monks obtained in 1483.

The Church of St. Michael belonged to the Monastery of Christ Church, and there was probably no churchyard for burials, as the parishioners in their wills desire to be buried in the cemetery of the Monastery of St. Augustine. The north side of Burgate Street would seem to have been in this parish, which is first mentioned in an undated deed, of about the year 1250, in which Felicia, the daughter of William Gech, gave to Henry de Bedistun all her messuage with appurtenances in the parish of St. Michael, situated between the gate of the Monastery of Christ Church in Burgate on the one side, and the house of Reginald Sutons of Borgate (sic) on the other side. The witnesses are Thomas Chiche, Hamo Doge, John Dodekre (who was a witness in a Queningate Deed, dated 1248, and was several times one of the Bailiffs of Canterbury), Gregory Palmer, William de Lose, Henry Stabular, Robilard the Cellarer, Dionisius (or Denis) of the Church (de Ecclesie), Michael of the Refectory, Ralph Dudyn, David de Burgate, and Roger the cleric. There is no date, but a seal of green wax—"Felice daughter of William."

† "The French landed at Dover on the 2nd August 1295, and after ravaging the town with fire and sword forced an entrance into St. Martin's Priory. The monks fled and hid themselves, except Thomas de la Hale, who was old and infirm, whom the Frenchmen found in the dormitory, and requested him to say where the treasures had been placed. But he refused, and was slain. When the other monks returned after the departure of the Frenchmen, they found their murdered brother, who was buried with great ceremony as a martyr to duty, and miracles were wrought at his tomb.

"In the following January the Bishop of Winchester (John de Pontissard) was at Dover, and from him the monks obtained the grant of an indulgence for forty days to all who should pray for the soul of their martyred brother. Archbishop Whittlesey in October 1307, when at Dover Priory, granted the same indulgence; and the widow of the Black Prince was prevailed to ask her son, Richard II., to request the Pope to canonize Dover's Saint. But the monks of Canterbury feared rivalry, and although enquiry was made in 1382, Thomas de la Hale was never canonized, though his reputation flourished."—Journal of the British Archæological Association, Sept. 1884.
